The step in EGRA method has an aim. The first is aim of exposure in which this is to cover the learners have good grammar item; the second is aim of generalization in which is let learners to remember the conclusion both about form and function (ss); the third is aim of reinforcement which is to give a time for learners to edit or revise the generalization; the fourth is aim of application which is to apply a grammar items that learner have in the previous step for communicate information or transfer message. The form in English language need to be understand, how to create a good sentence in correct arrangement and how to have a solution and well grammar in communication<sup>15</sup>. ### Why EGRA method?

To answer this, the definition of items must be analyze. Increasing students' understanding about learning structure is one goal in teaching English. In the learning process the students often get difficulties in learning English grammatical rules. To minimize the difficulties, the English teacher must be able to choose good method and technique. One of the learning methods is EGRA (Exposure, Generalization, Reinforcement, Application). The implementation of the EGRA method make the students apply their knowledge, equate their knowledge in general, provide reinforcement and apply it in practice.

EGRA is the method use in the classroom to make easy for the students to understand of grammar (the brief explanation each stages of EGRA method as follows <sup>19</sup>:

a. Exposure

Exposure is an opening stage for students to expose the meaningful use in a universal structure item in sentences. It is also effective to present previous taught structures, which have vary benefit.

b. Generalization

The generalization is the central of EGRA methods were students is expected to make a discovery language structure. Learning stage for students using tasks to discover form, meaning and function of a structure (grammatical rule) they have been exposed.

c. Reinforcement

Reinforcement is a main stage for students to provide the correctly knowledge both of the functions and form of the formula item that learners have been exposed to.

<sup>19</sup> Reski Pilu, Hardianto, and Ardhy Supraba, "The Effectiveness of EGRA ( Exposure , Generalization , Reinforcement , Application ) Method in Teaching," Jurnal Studi Guru dan Pembelajaran (2020).

The objective here is to help learners to check it or revise their generalization in corrected and consciousness both of the function and form of a certain formula item.

d. Application

Application is the crucial learning stage for students to use directly or applying the structure item opportunities learned to communicate in English either receptively or productively.

The implementation of EGRA method

Action is the process while doing. It is the implementation of planning before doing. So, in this phase, everything that will be planned was done clear. There are many activities in the class. By using (EGRA) according to <sup>20</sup>, are:

1. Exposure is a set of question by the teacher to learners in lesson that will be taught in simple present tense, include (showing picture, brain storming, and giving keyword). Here the teacher told the fact that always happen. For example: Rudy study English very night).
2. Generalization stage are:
  - a. Ask to create a group for learners at least 4-5 member for one group in the class.
  - b. Offer a task by teacher for text model, question model, quiz model to guiding the learners finding the function, and the form to develop the sentence. Here some of sentences in simple present tense show and students have to find both about the function and the form according to the sentences. Example: Rudy study English every night ( Rudy is subject, study is V1, English is object, and every night is adverb of time)
  - c. The student are asking to analyze the answer in each group.
  - d. The students' answer write by the teacher in board.

  - f. The students pay attention to the model of how to say and read the discuss in the white board.
3. Reinforcement:

<sup>20</sup> Nurrahmatiah, "Improving the Students' Grammar Ability Through EGRA (Exposure, Geberalization, Reinforcement, Application) Method Of The Second Year Students Of SMP Moncoloe Makassar," UIN Alauddin Makassar Vol. 9 (2010).

- a. The teacher in the white board explain some students' answer to refresh them.
  - b. Both the function and the form of structural was given by the teacher to make clear the material.
  - c. The teacher used another example as a model.
  - d. The teacher sound continuously about how to pronounce.

  - h. The students together with their teacher discuss the answer classically.
4. Application is describe the students here to do the task for simple present tense individually, the students use the correct grammar in sentences by applying in the classroom, the teacher gives task card and the students are asked to respond the situation and cases, at the end the teacher gives homework related to simple present tense for explaining in the next meeting.

CONCLUSION

The use of EGRA method was believed to be effective in mastery of student's simple present tense. The EGRA method encouraged students to generate ideas in simple present tense. The implementation of (EGRA) method helping learners observe their way in studying grammar, exclusively in studying Simple present tense. Start of simple present tense because it is the simple grammar to study. Next competence is the (EGRA) method also create learners in explore a good cooperation in team discussion to analyze the exercise ( discuss) and divisible their competence and the background about the lesson. The method can also help teacher to offer opportunities for the students to discuss. In this case it improve that using EGRA method really help students problem in facing the grammar. Here the role of teacher become a guider and observer. Because the EGRA simply students in motivation, and interesting activities. It also improve student's social interaction, such as generalization, reinforcement, communication and respect for other people's ideas. So that, applying (EGRA) method as a method in teaching grammar skill is success for students. In this case, the teacher have to provide the students with kind of activities that are motivate them, especially by using an appropriate method such as the use of EGRA method. School should seek educational and training on method and innovations in learning for teachers to be able to support the implementation of learning so that learning can be achieved as expected.
